Wall Sconce 6867-W-1 "Donhauser"

The Seventies Family

The line of fixtures was designed by the architect Page Donhauser for his own private residence. The namesake chandelier makes use of the hugely successful Sputnik Elements of the Metropolitan line combining it with shades made of precious hand-cut rectangular crystals. The structure is made of brass with a nickel finish. The cylindrical element can easily be removed for cleaning. This new design picks up the cylindrical shade to create a fine but still exquisite wall light. By omitting the sputnik elements this fixture is reduced to the pure shade and emanates a clean and modest air, perfectly fitting any modern environment.
