Table Lamp 937-3

The Russian Empire Family

This is an elegant table lamp from the Empire period with three arms. The layout of the item with the arms protruding to the front and sides makes it perfect for narrow mantelpieces or consoles as it can be placed close to a wall. On a table a pair can be positioned back to back.

The stone elements are made from exquisite white marble and the metal is brass with a precious king's gold finish.

The typical icicles the period is prominent for make up for most of the crystals. The tuft-like designs around the tassels and the top give a wonderful playful and lofty expression.
