In 1770 as Conrad Linck drew up numerous flower designs, he could never have dreamt what an exciting future lay in store for such candidates as this little carnation. For one, it enjoyed life as a decoration on his grand chandeliers. And since 2002 it has also been available to purchase separately as a unique handmade blossom. In combination with its bigger sister, the hand-painted table carnation, or with a peony or a Japanese cherry blossom, it is fit to grace any table.
