White-blue

Bavaria does it: from the Rhineland in the west to Sylt in the north, more and more traditional costumes are being worn in Germany and accessories are showing up in many places, telling tales of the simple life near the Alpine border. The best example of this is the small, blue-white porcelain drum, which delights those from the Rhineland in particular: these little drums are enormously popular in the Rhineland strongholds of “Karneval”. Anyone who has ever seen Cologne’s Rose Monday Parade will know about the magical power that a fiery and loud samba rhythm holds.
